

Much attention & many acts of intolerance against religious liberty & Christian values have been levied against our state over the past month due to our governor & legislature taking a firm stand against LGBT activists by passing HB2. Bible believing Christians should applaud their action & continue to pray for them. This past week, in a neighboring state, a court ruling took place that may have future implications for NC. On April 19, a US appeals court ruled for a Virginia female student who "identifies" as a male to use the male restroom. This could possibly impact transgender policies related to our public schools. Last year a 15-yr-old girl who now identifies as male, filed a lawsuit to force her school district to let her use male restrooms. The girl, who legally changed her name to Gavin Grimm, was originally allowed to use the restroom of her choice at her Virginia high school. After receiving complaints from local parents & residents, the Gloucester County school board voted 6-1 to adopt a policy that bath-rooms & locker rooms "be limited to the corresponding biological genders & students with gender identity issues shall be provided an alternative appropriate private facility" (similar to provisions in our law here). With the help of the ACLU, Grimm sued the school board saying that denying her the use of the male restroom violated Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. The federal district court originally denied the injunction & dismissed Grimm's claim. But on April 19 the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit ruled in favor of Grimm, saying Title IX protects the rights of transgender students to use sex segregated facilities that are "consistent with their gender identity." As the NY Times notes, this is the first time a federal appellate court has ruled that Title IX protects the rights of such students to use the bathroom that corresponds with their gender identity. In April 2014, the Dept. of Education (DOE) issued an unprecedented guideline extending federal civil rights protections under Title IX to transgender students. Federal regulations expressly state that this type of 'significant guidance document' has no binding legal authority. As Alliance Defending Freedom attorney Jeremy Tedesco says: "[T]he document does not mention access to restrooms & it doesn't change binding Title IX regulations authorizing schools to create 'separate toilet, locker room, & shower facilities on the basis of sex.'" It would take an act of Congress to include 'gender identity' as a protected status under Title IX. The school can defend itself against this lawsuit without losing its federal funding. And it should. Allowing students access to the opposite sex's restrooms would violate the privacy rights of the vast majority of students and trample the rights of parents as well. The appeals court, however, is treating the document as being legally binding & is requiring the district court to reevaluate Grimm's request for a preliminary injunction under the DOE's standard. Roger Gannam, with the Liberty Counsel, filed an amicus brief in the case on behalf of the school district, says, the five states covered by the Fourth Circuit — VA, NC, MD, WV & SC — must now follow the federal DOE's interpretation of Title IX on this issue. If the district court interprets the DOE's statement in a way that allows Grimm to use the male restrooms, then any transgender students in those states who want to use the opposite-sex restrooms must be allowed to do so. I urge you to pray for those who are fighting these legal battles on our behalf. I also encourage parents & students to stand for your rights & religious liberty if your school buckles under the pressure of political correctness & illegitimate regulations. In a book by Chuck Swindoll he tells the story of the maiden flight of a new airliner flying from Chicago to Los Angeles. About an hour after takeoff the passengers on board hear a voice over the speaker. It began "this is a recording. You have the privilege of being on the first completely electronic controlled jet. This plane took off electronically. It is now flying at 40,000 feet electronically. It will land in Los Angeles electronically. This plane has no pilot, no co-pilot, and no flight engineer because with this advanced system they are no longer needed. But do not worry; nothing can possibly go wrong.....go wrong.....go wrong.....go wrong".

Everything is seemingly going well then you get the bad news; "Our Company is closing or moving", "you have cancer", "I want a divorce", "Someone has hacked into your bank account", "you only have six more months to live". Remember, during those times that others have received the same news and thought they could not make it. But with the gracious, loving, all powerful hand of our God it hurt but they made it! And you can too! Read Philippians 4:6-9 (NLT) "Don't worry – pray and verse 9 closed saying "then the God of peace will be with you". Our life is not on automatic electronic control. We do have a pilot and He know what is going on and He cares.....He cares.....He cares..... ~ Pastor Joe
